Want to help? Then they want to talk to you!

Positions at Grapevine are currently open to all majors.

While their focus is currently set on students with proficient coding & development skills, they're highly interested in talking with anyone who believes they may be able to help.

Students who join the Grapevine team can expect to:

- Apply their studies (i.e. computer science, marketing/finance, graphic design, etc.) to the startup world - a process so unscripted, there's really no better way of testing your knowledge!
- Attend pitches & negotiations with investors, accelerators, incubators and potential customers.
- Speak with seasoned, serial-entrepreneur mentors.
- Learn the secrets behind Business Model Canvasing and effective pitching.
- Have an optional, full-time (perhaps even Founding) position waiting for them upon graduation.
- Come away with an experience making for a fantastic addition to any resume.
- Work with an awesome, laid-back (yet highly motivated of course) team of students - possibly even making for the creation of a "second family!"
- Become a fan of RedBull if not one already.

Get credit while you're at it!

It's not too late to declare independent studies with the Registrar, allowing you to earn your choice of around 1-3 credits for having a little extra fun this semester!

Details on this can be provided at first sit-down.

You might as well at least reach out, right?

If you think you may be interested in a position, it's preferred that you visit their site (www.project-grapevine.com) and fill out a quick Qualtrics questionnaire found under the "Join Our Team" section.

Completing this form is not necessary - it's simply an efficient way for the folks at Grapevine to get a feel for who you are and what questions they have for you before any face-to-face meetings occur. If you'd rather skip this process and email them directly (grapevine@bitrix24.com), you're more than welcome to do so.
